

The coffee app grew up this month.

It moved from a working prototype toward an operator-ready product: persistent data, simpler access, and a phone-first workflow.

01 Your data is permanent

Clients, crew, productions, and orders live in the shared database. A device failure does not erase the operating record.

02 Simple authenticated access

Authorized operators sign in with their assigned account. Public signup is not part of the workflow.

03 Everything runs from a phone

Preparation, the live drink board, and label output are designed around a mobile operating loop.

04 Branded for Capture This

The cup-label system carries the Capture This visual identity across multiple layouts.

05 The live board got bolder

The shoot-day board is faster to scan for a coordinator moving through a set with one hand free.

06 Simpler everywhere

Fewer decisions and tighter flows make the product easier to hand to another authorized operator.

WHAT WAS NEXT AT THE TIME

Design polish

Tighter type, spacing, and visual consistency.

Live sync

Multiple authorized phones seeing current order state.

Easier handoff

Clearer setup and operating instructions.
